

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE.

A structure of a security element for documents and a device for testing documents provided with such security elements as well as a method of testing
5 specific properties of the element. The security element may provided with a combination of differently reacting or responding security features and functional designs, including conductive, magnetic and diffractive ones, which render it difficult or impossible for counterfeiters to discover the functioning of the security element.